Accreditation Program Training For All Newly Hired Employees

The Worcester Polytechnic Institute Police Department was awarded Certification with the Massachusetts Police Accreditation Commission (MPAC) on November 5, 2015.

Certification is a self-initiated evaluation process by which police departments strive to meet and maintain standards that have been established for the profession, by the profession. These carefully selected standards reflect critical areas of police management, operations, and technical support activities. They cover areas such as policy development, emergency response planning, training, communications, property and evidence handling, use of force, vehicular pursuit, prisoner transportation and holding facilities. The program not only sets standards for the law enforcement profession, but also for the delivery of police services to the citizens of the Commonwealth.

Achieving Certification from the Massachusetts Police Accreditation Commission is considered a very significant accomplishment and is a recognition that is highly regarded by the law enforcement community.

MPAC is the only state accreditation program for police agencies in Massachusetts.

Presently, there are 200 police agencies participating in the program. Twenty nine of those are college and university police departments, including the WPI Police Department.

MPAC offers two program awards; Certification and Accreditation.

- In order to become Certified, 159 Standards must be met.
- In order to become Accredited, an additional 167-192 must be met (depending on the size of the police agency).
- Accreditation is the higher of the two awards.

Participation in the program is strictly voluntary.

The process begins with a thorough examination of the police agency by the police agency, to determine compliance with the standards. This self-assessment or internal evaluation initiated by the Chief of Police is then followed by an assessment by MPAC appointed assessors. Those assessors are typically Chiefs of Police and Accreditation Managers from other police agencies, which are enrolled in the program. These assessors are trained to conduct assessments on behalf of MPAC.

Standards generally dictate which topical areas a police agency must have policies and procedures on, leaving the development and enforcement of agency specific policies and procedures up to the agency's CEO (Chief) and its supervisory staff.

The vast majority of the standards require agencies to commit their often unwritten policies and procedures to writing; the remaining standards are equipment and facility related.

MPAC uses (CALEA) Commission on Accreditation for Law Enforcement Standards, which are national standards based on best practices for police agencies

Generally a standard is going to ask three things.

- Does an agency have a written policy or directive on a particular subject matter?

- Does the agency follow the policy or directive?
- Is there written documentation, demonstrating that the agency follows that policy or directive?

The Certification and Accreditation processes are not performance evaluations of individuals. They are measures of the Police Department's policies and procedures, typically dealing with whether the department has written guidelines covering specific aspects of its management and operations.

Certification and Accreditation programs do not certify and accredit Chiefs of Police or any other individuals in police agencies. They certify and accredit the police departments as a whole.

The WPI Police Department had an onsite assessment for Certification on August 19, 2015. During that process, MPAC's Executive Director and three assessors spent the entire day reviewing our agency's policies and procedures, required training records, and other documentation. They also examined areas such as the property and evidence room, the communications center, and marked police vehicles to assure that they were in compliance with MPAC's Standards. At the end of the day, we were found to be in compliance with all of the mandatory standards, which led to the award that we received on November 5, 2015.

Over the next twelve months, we will be preparing for an Accreditation assessment. We are required to comply with an additional 167 standards. We will again have an on-site assessment similar to the assessment for Certification. After the assessment team determines that we are in compliance with the Accreditation Standards, we will receive the award of Accreditation.

The process does not end there. After our Department becomes accredited, we are required to be assessed for Re-Accreditation every three years. During the three year periods between assessments, we are required to monitor and evaluate our compliance with the standards. That means, for instance, reviewing all written policies, rules and regulations, and other directives on an annual basis. It also requires us to assure that all employees attend any mandatory training and that the training and mandated policy distribution are sufficiently documented.

All employees of the WPI Police Department are involved in the process, whether they know it or not, from the moment that they become employed. This includes sworn officers, dispatchers, traffic officers, administrative personnel, EMS members, and SNAP employees. In brief, this begins with the requirements on how we conduct and document background investigations on candidates for employment. It subsequently involves documenting employees' required training, how we handle and document citizens' complaints against employees, how we document use of force incidents, and finally how we retain employee records once their employment ends.

The question that is often asked is, "Why would a police agency become involved in the Certification or Accreditation Process if they are not required to do so?"

The answer is that Certification and Accreditation:

- Provide a norm for an agency to judge its performance.
- Provide a basis to correct deficiencies before they become public problems.
- Require agencies to commit policies and procedures to writing.
- Promote accountability among agency personnel and the evenhanded application of policies.
- Provide a means of independent evaluation of agency operations.
- Minimize an agency's exposure to liability, builds a stronger defense against lawsuits, and has the potential to reduce liability insurance costs.
- Enhance the reputation of the agency and increases the public's confidence in it.
